

Student Schedule conflicts

Late evening classes overlap with smaller sporting events.

- Many secondary sports occur (volleyball, soccer, etc) at 6-8pm
- Students with labs or night courses cannot attend.

Godkayla3

Limited flexibility to attend optional point-earning events.

- events are often schedules without consideration of course timetables.
- Few weekend or daytime options exist

Godkayla3

Academic requirements prioritized over extracurricular involvement.

- Students feel penalized for fulfilling academic obligations.
- Conflicts cause frustration and decreased school spirit.

Godkayla3

Lack of makeup opportunities for students with schedule conflicts.

- No alternative events or online engagement options offered.
- Students miss out completely. Once an event is over

Godkayla3

Ticket Point System Issues

Points heavily tied to physical attendance at specific times.

- Attendance is the only measurable factor currently rewarded.
- System favor students with more free time.

Godkayla3

No alternative ways to earn points.

- Academic or service involvement isn't recognized.
- Virtual or asynchronous participation doesn't count.

Godkayla3

System doesn't account for diverse schedules or commitments.

- Students balancing jobs or family care are disadvantaged.
- Commuters may struggle to attend evening events.

Godkayla3

Create any quality between students with different availability.

- On campus residence often gain more points.
- Part-time or nontraditional students are unintentionally excluded.

Godkayla3

Communication and Awareness

Students unaware of all ways to earn points.

- Details are buried in emails or on separate websites.
- First year students especially struggle to find information.

Godkayla3

Limited promotion of event schedules or deadlines.

- Some events are announced with little notice.
- Missed communication leads to fewer participation opportunities.

Godkayla3

Confusing rules for how points are calculated or transferred.

- Lack of transparency creates misunderstandings.
- Students unsure of how attendance is verified.

Godkayla3

Lack of centralized communication about fair access options.

- No clear guidance for students with unavoidable conflicts.
- Different departments handle events separately.

Godkayla3

Accessibility and Inclusion

Some students face barriers beyond class time.

- Working students or those with dependents can't attend.
- Events don't consider accessibility needs or transportation limits.

Godkayla3

Point system unintentionally favor students living on or near campus.

- Commuters have difficulty returning for evening games.
- Parking and travel time at extra challenges.

Godkayla3

May frustration or lower moral among affected students.

- Students feel excluded from campus traditions.
- Perceived unfairness affects school spirit and engagement.

Godkayla3

Doesn't reflect equal opportunity for all to participate in school spirit.

- The system rewards convenience rather than effort.
- Misses the chance to include diverse student populations.

Godkayla3

Potential Solutions/ Opportunities

Offer alternative ways to earn points.

- Academic workshops, community service or virtual events could qualify.
- Create a balance point system valuing multiple types of involvement.

Godkayla3

Implement a petition or appeal system for class conflicts.

- Students could submit proof of class schedule or earn equivalent points.
- Promotes fairness and recognition of academic commitment.

Godkayla3

Create digital tracking for alternative engagement activities.

- Use apps or QR codes to log participation in approved alternatives.
- Makes the system more flexible and data driven.

Godkayla3

Adjust evening scheduling or diversify point opportunities.

- Offer events at various times and days of the week.
- Rotate opportunities so all students can participate throughout the semester.

Godkayla3